

Paranormal Romance Author's Debut Novel Immortal Obsession Combines Vampires, Literary Intrigue

New Jersey author's first novel to be released on 10.10.10

[10.10.2010] Morris Plains, NJ -- Imagine, for a moment, that you are one of the last descendants of a star-crossed union between a vampire and a mortal aristocrat in Revolution-era Paris. More than 200 years later, your witness of a savage murder in present-day Manhattan leads you to a mysterious, ethereal stranger who saves your life – and entangles you in a world you never imagined was real.

This is the enthralling story that begins author Denise K. Rago's debut novel Immortal Obsession, which is part paranormal romance, part vampire tale, and part immaculately-rendered literary fiction.

The novel's heady blend of romance and violence play out against the backdrop of the world's most unforgettable cities: a ravished, Revolution-era Paris and the darkest corners of modern Manhattan.

With her powerful debut novel, Rago joins the tradition of other masters of the paranormal genre like Tanya Huff, Anne Rice, Chelsea Quinn Yarbro, and Donna Boyd.

On October 10th, 2010, Immortal Obsession will be available for purchase at www.denisekrago.com as well as book outlets nationwide. The author's website, featuring custom oil paintings of each character as envisioned by New Jersey artist Pauli Verridicci, will launch on the same date.

About the author: Rago, a longtime blogger, avid reader, and art history buff who earned her master's in Museum Professions and interned at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City, has published a captivating, otherworldly novel that will attract voracious fiction readers and lovers of the paranormal alike. Her website is www.denisekrago.com. She resides in New Jersey with her family.
